To the Memory of My Dear Husband.

Lonely I listen for his footsteps, but in vain.
Oh, dear Heaven, can it be that never again
In this world so sad and drear
His loving voice no more I'll hear?

Life is so empty now—the light is gone;
I grope in darkness, weary, sad, and lone,
Calling in agony to one so dead,
Whose ears death closed—he can not hear.

My loving words or bitter weeping,
As I bend o'er the grave where he is sleeping—
His eyes, those eyes of tender hue,
Through which a noble soul so kind and true,
Shone constantly, are closed forever now.

Death sets his seal upon the pure brow
Of him who was the idol of my heart.
Oh, cruel Death, thou lovest a shining mark!
Could I but clasp my dear one to my breast,
And my poor, weary heart at last find rest—
A rest so sweet, alas! I know it cannot be.

No more in life shall I my husband see
For him there is sweet peaceful rest
In that home where all are blest,
To me there is only the sad and bitter tears
Through all the long and weary years.

—M. F. CLERK.

The Power of Purpose in Life.

There is no true manhood without a high purpose. Purpose is moral concentration. It is the rudiment of individual life. Purpose means having an object in life, a definite goal to attain. It is not confined to an exalted ambition, towering into the clouds of the unattainable—it means the conscious directing each individual should give to his life.

The mother in her home can have this purpose within the four walls of her home—it may find its finest fulfillment there. It may be the consecration of her energies to the genuine, careful training of her children, watching more closely their individual needs. But it is purpose. It is not "letting things work themselves out." Oneness of purpose can accomplish almost anything it seeks to do, because every ray of mental energy and spiritual vitality is concentrated. The sun's rays can be focused through a lens of ice and made to melt steel, while the ice itself is unmelting.

Most of the failures in life come from wasted energies, from scattering one's forces over many subjects. From a vain attempt at versatility. Men of merely ordinary ability have made brilliant successes, while men of brilliant mind have made ordinary failures. Well-tilled gardens pay better than poorly managed farms.

It was the well-aimed firing of the American gunners that won our war with Spain. Every shot had a definite purpose. Lord Wolsey's advice to young soldiers was "If you want to get on, you must try to get shot." It means keeping in the thick of the fight, daring and doing with the whole mind focused on the thought of victory.

Young men starting out in life should have a definite purpose. There is stimulus, strength and companionship in a great purpose. It makes failures but mere incidents on the march. There is wondrous unifying of energy that comes from the determination to reach a point set far in advance. Every day is then lived in harmony with that purpose. Each successive day shows new progress, slight though it be; new conquest of obstacle, new strengthening of habit, new miracles of turning the water of weakness into the wine of power. Then the weeks become white milestones on the road to realization. All Nature stands aside—for the man of a mighty purpose. When hope dies and purpose fades into nothingness, a man begins to drift. There is danger that he may become a human derelict—like an abandoned ship, with no crew, no cargo, no compass, no known port of destination.

Let us ask ourselves the question: "What is my purpose? What am I living for? Is it worth living for? Is it as high standard as I should have? What should I sacrifice to attain it?" This purpose should not be mere success in the world, that, in itself, is not enough for a true purpose. "What do you intend to do with your success? What will you do for the world with your enlarged opportunities?" The supreme test of a great purpose, the final test, is not "What can I get?" but "What can I give. Christ reached Calvary, but he gave Salvation.—Saturday Evening Post.

Death of John G. Cackley at Clinton, Illinois.

From the Clinton (Illinois) Register.

Wednesday at 6 o'clock p. m. John G. Cackley died at his home on East Washington street, aged 66 years, 11 months, and 15 days. He had been in failing health two or three years. Last fall he was stricken with paralysis and his health had failed more rapidly since that time. Physicians could give him no hope of recovery, and he went to Indiana Springs a few weeks ago, but it soon became evident the treatment there would prove of no benefit, and he returned home to await the final summons which came when he was surrounded by all his children and other relatives.

John G. Cackley was born June 25, 1832, near Huntersville, West Virginia. His father was one of the best known men in that State, being a member of the legislature fifteen years. The parents, William and Jennie Cackley, moved to Illinois in 1851, settling in this county on what is known as the Weaver Farm, west of Clinton where they lived several years. They moved to Clinton, occupying the property which is now the home of Lewis Campbell. In 1860 the father died; surviving him being the mother and seven children: Robert Cackley, Springfield, Ill.; Ann Cackley, Heyworth, Ill.; J. F. Cackley, southwest of Clinton; A. D. Cackley, Clinton; J. G. Cackley (the deceased); Sallie Cackley, Heyworth, Ill.; Mrs. Leah Hogshead, Jamestown, Ohio. Except the mother, who died in 1880, and the deceased, all of the family are living.

In 1860 he was married to Miss Alcinda Cundiff in Farmer City, who with four children survive him. They are William T. Cackley, Denison, Tex.; Mrs. Minnie B. Drake, Lexington, Ky.; Clayburn C. Frederic, and Bert S. of Clinton. One child died when 5 years old.

Deceased was one of the best known men in the county and had been active in business until a year or two ago, when failing health compelled him to retire. He had accumulated considerable property which mainly consists of a good farm just west of Clinton, his residence property, and two store buildings in Clinton. He sold the State bank building a short time ago. He had been an honored member of the I. O. O. F. lodge of Clinton about forty years, and had held all the offices in the lodge. He was liberal and contributed freely to any worthy cause. A Clinton banker said the checks of no man for church and charitable purposes often came to the bank. He was unassuming, friendly to all and was a kind father and affectionate husband. Politically he was a Democrat, though he took no part in the discussion of politics.

Ramon Beats Them All.

Henry Bissell, Hatton, Arkansas, says: "I can not find words to explain the worth of Ramon's Liver Pills and Ramon's Relief. I suffered with colic for years, and the doctors failed to do me any good. I cured it with Ramon's Relief and Ramon's Liver Pills. I have sold drugs and medicines for 27 years, and have handled all kinds of patent medicines. Ramon beats them all. I have sold and used Ramon's for ten years with always the greatest satisfaction. Hundreds of customers will testify that Ramon's Liver Pills are the best family medicine they ever used. I wish every family had a trial dose in their house to-day."

The Two Purest Persons.

MR. EDITOR: I have had some trouble in finding the answer to the Biblical question in the Times of May 25, 1899. The question was, Who were the two purest human beings whose history is recorded at length in the Bible. I do not know whether my answer is right or not but suppose it must have been Enoch and Elijah, as they never even sinned once, and were carried up to Heaven in a chariot of fire.

I am, yours respectfully,

Great Age of Birds.

It is only possible at present to collect data from the duration of lives of birds in captivity; evidence otherwise must be very unreliable and it is purely a matter of theory as to whether the natural possible life is greater than that under the unnatural condition of captivity.

There are records of a nightingale having lived 25 years, a thrush 17, a blackbird that was still alive at 20, a goldfinch 23, skylarks of 24 and 20, Ravens, owls and cockatoos are popularly supposed to live to a very great age, and the following records appear to be authentic: Raven, 50; gray parrot, 50 and 40; blue macaw, 64; eagle owl, 53, and one still alive at 68. Some aquatic birds appear to live to a ripe old age, for we hear of a heron of 60, goose 80, mute swan 70. It is doubtful whether any of the foregoing ages are any true guide as to the longevity of the actual families the birds represent, or, indeed, whether the possible age of one family exceeds that of another, but the records are interesting and form a step in the ladder of the investigation of this most difficult question: The coloring of a bird in perfect health and the texture of its feathers are exactly the same at 50 as at 5, and those signs that are popularly put down to age such as bleached and faded plumage and misshapen claws or beaks, are attributable to unnatural or unnatural conditions of some kind. The great tenacity of life some birds possess when deprived of food is marvelous, and the following instances are given: Golden eagle, 21 days; an elder duck, 28; an albatross, 35, and a penguin, it is stated, can live two months.—The Ibis.

Bad management keeps more people in poor circumstances than any other one cause. To be successful one must look ahead and plan ahead so that when a favorable opportunity presents itself he is ready to take advantage of it. A little forethought will also save much expense and valuable time. A prudent and careful man will keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house, the shiftless fellow will wait until necessity compels it and then ruin his best horse going for a doctor, and have a big doctor bill to pay besides; one pays out 25 cents, the other is out a hundred dollars, and then wonders why his neighbor is getting richer while he is getting poorer.

The true source of the Nile, the most famous of all rivers, has been the geographical problem of all historic ages. It seems to have been found at last. The 22d of May a letter was received at Berlin written by Dr. R. Kandt, the central African explorer. His plan of exploration was this. When he came to a confluence of streams he would ascertain which had the greater flow of water. This branch he would follow until he came to the confluence that formed it. This he did until he came to the Bukavara, which he followed up stream to the mountains. August 13, 1896, after three days march he reached a low cave on the slope of Mount Tschud, whence he found the true source of the Nile issuing drop by drop from its walls.

Biggle Berry Book, being No. 2 of the Biggle Books, is all about berries. A whole encyclopedia of berry lore, boiled down after the manner of FARM JOURNAL. Tells about varieties, about planting, growing, mulching, cultivating, picking, and marketing. It gives practical pointers from the pens of scores of leading berry growers from all parts of the country who have contributed to its columns. It has colored representations of berries true to size and color, thirty-three portraits of practical berry men, and thirty-five other illustrations, handsomely bound in cloth. The price is 50 cents, free by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

The recent purchase by Germany of the Caroline, Palao, and Marianne Islands makes it the interest of Germany and America to be on their most pleasant behavior towards each other as good neighbors. It looks now as if it will be England, America, and Germany against the world for national and commercial supremacy, as all such things seem to be coming their way.
